Western Australian timbers include but are not limited to;

TUART (Eucalyptus gomphocephala) – Tuart is sufficiently rare that supplies of the timber are limited to coming from private property. The timber is pale-yellow brown in colour and very hard.

JARRAH BURL (Eucalyptus marginata) – Jarrah is unique to Western Australia and is renowned for its beautiful and richly coloured hardwood. Burl refers to the timber produced from carbuncle like growths on the trunks of trees. The resulting timber is full of knots and swirls that make for an extremely attractive feature

NATIVE PEPPERMINT (Agonis flexuosa) – This timber is quite rare as the tree is not harvested from state forests and comes only from private land. The heartwood is light brown with some streaking and shows a subtle but attractive grain. The tree grows only in the south west corner of Western Australia

WA SHEOAK (Allocasuarina fraseriana) – Colour dark red to brown with yellow sapwood and prominent medullary rays. Sheoak has been used for items such as beer barrels and roof shingles. Is now widely used for decorative woodwork, turnery and flooring. Exclusive to Western Australia in limited quantities
